

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to air an anti-Kerry film threatens democracy by furthering the private politically-based control of public airways. Potentially, many Americans will view this politically biased film while the private-politically-controlled Sinclair stations keep their influence invisible. The increasing one-sided use of our public air-ways is a sure pathway to the destruction of democracy in America. The FCC must understand that more and more of grass-roots Americans are concerned about today's power-based political control of our public airways. We must all be seriously engaged to stop these political sources - the likes of Sinclair - for they do not serve America well. The FCC needs to examine fairly the underlying motives of our system of public airways and restructure for the common good.
